Location: Perth, Western Australia
Date: 21/01/2016

For Immediate Release

Transmin, a leading provider of innovative mechanical equipment design and application for bulk materials handling industries throughout Australia and internationally, and Flexco, a global leader in the design, manufacture and supply of products that enhance belt conveyor productivity, today announced a Global Project Partnership Agreement.

The Global Project Partnership delivers mutual customers Transmin's world-class engineered equipment and supplies, with the support of Flexco's extensive range of tough, durable belt conveyor products that enhance productivity.

Transmin and Flexco have a long history of collaboration in the resources and bulk materials handling industries, both in Australia and worldwide. Most recently, Transmin and Flexco Australia collaborated on the successful tender for the supply of custom designed primary belt cleaners for a coal terminal on Canada's west coast which boasts belt widths of 4000mm wide.

Flexco engineers designed two HXF Super RHS Extra Heavy-Duty Primary Belt Cleaners with a tip width of 3600mm and overall length of 4800mm to suit the massive 4m wide belts on site. Transmin have successfully tendered for the ongoing supply of four more 4000mm wide extra heavy-duty belt cleaners over the next two years.

"The global project partnership is valuable as it maximises the already extensive product range and support we can supply our customers," said Matthew Brooks, Supplies Manager of Transmin. "Using the combined capabilities of the businesses, we can offer comprehensive solutions to belt conveyors issues with the ongoing support of Flexco products for global projects."

The partnership between Transmin and Flexco combines two global leaders in the bulk materials handling industry that are dedicated to providing project customers with a holistic approach to increasing productivity onsite.
