

Trans-Africa Projects (TAP) has reached an exciting milestone as the company celebrates 25 years of delivering premier power evacuation services across Africa and beyond.

TAP is an independent consultancy firm, which was established in 1995 through an equal joint venture between the biggest power utility on the African continent ESKOM and an American multinational leading engineering, procurement and construction company FLUOR.

With this unique blend of shareholders, the past two and a half decades have seen this power utility backed consultancy firm become the most sought after solutions provider for power utilities across the African continent and beyond. TAP's myriad of services include feasibility studies, power line and substation design, electrification design, project management, construction management and commissioning, procurement, power line and substation audits, structural, civil, mechanical and electrical engineering designs, among others.

Through its experienced, dedicated, diverse and highly skilled resource team, TAP has etched a reputation on the market of being a highly-rated and sought-after innovative energy solutions provider.

"With a footprint of 25 COUNTRIES we hope to grow in more countries through provision of optimal power evacuation solutions", says interim TAP Managing Director, Nicholas Msibi.

With our 25 years of experience in the industry, we use our skill set and knowledge by providing training services to help transform Africa thereby ensuring that the continent thrives. This is achieved through our in-house learning opportunities, bursaries and further support to smaller industry businesses who are eager to grow.

"We always strive to live by our core values; Safety, Integrity, Customer Satisfaction and Excellence (SICE). We trust that these values will continue to aid us in achieving more years to be the premier supplier of engineering power evacuation solutions in Africa and beyond", says Nicholas Msibi.

TAP will be offering its in-house training courses to our existing clients as a token of our appreciation for the support provided to TAP for the past 25 YEARS. Details to follow on 15 September 2020 at our webinar.
